Where The Experts Talk Security 2010

SYNOPSIS

With a growing number of government regulations, threats from financial markets and intensifying requirements from stakeholders, there is no escaping the importance of IT Security, Risk and Compliance. Due to these pressures and demands, organizations no longer manage these disciplines in silos by different departments. Instead, they are developing unified strategies to help control costs, standardize processes, and integrate technology to solidify the risk and compliance at every level within an organization. The most successful organizations are those that effectively comply with regulations, minimize their risk and implement a good governance structure. This is why RSA, the security division of EMC and CyberSecurity, are working with some of the top IT companies and alliance partners like Cisco, Microsoft, VMware and Firmus to drive an industry conversation to identify the necessary strategy.

The conference sessions address new and continuing threats to information security as well as responses to the increasing risk of security breaches and data exfiltration, identity theft, cyber terrorism and more. The conference will provide information security professionals and managers with the most up-to-date information, tools, trends, legislation, and strategies for addressing information security issues.
